

EATER GUIDES

Feel Festive This Season at Christmas Pop-Up Bars and Other Wintery Spaces

Heated rooftop igloos, a ski lodge-inspired restaurant courtyard, and more

With Thanksgiving just days away — predicted to be one of the coldest ones in recent memory — it's time to start thinking about ways to cozy up during the holiday season. A number of local restaurants and bars will be hosting pop-ups or otherwise winterizing their offerings this year in an effort to keep away the chill, from a Christmas-themed cocktail extravaganza to heated rooftop igloos. Here's the rundown on several long-term pop-ups to check out this holiday season and throughout the winter. (See also: holiday lunches and afternoon teas.)

Rooftop Igloos at the Envoy Hotel

The Envoy Hotel (70 Sleeper St., Seaport District, Boston) is continuing its tradition of decking out its Lookout Rooftop with inflatable, illuminated, heated igloos for winter cocktail adventures. Open Wednesday through Saturday, from 4 p.m. to 11 p.m., the igloos are available for advance bookings (with various minimum spending requirements), seating up to 10 people. You can also try to snag one on a first come, first served basis.